20TH ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Abstracts and Speakers

Complete information for the concurrent and poster sessions—including titles, presenters and coauthors, and abstracts—will be available early in the summer. You can use the ASBH conference app or mobile website to decide which paper, panel, workshop, and poster presentations to attend and build your own schedule in advance. You can also view floor plans of the exhibit hall and maps of Anaheim. Watch the ASBH website for more information.

About ASBH

ASBH is a multidisciplinary not-for-profit organization dedicated to promoting an exchange of ideas and fostering multidisciplinary, interdisciplinary, and interprofessional scholarship, research, teaching, policy development, professional development, and collegiality among people engaged in all endeavors related to clinical and academic bioethics and the health-related humanities. The more than 1,600 members of ASBH are healthcare professionals, teachers, consultants, and others who have an interest in the fields of bioethics and humanities.

Thursday, October 18

8 am–Noon

Re-Imagining Communication: Using Medical Improv to Boost Your Skills for Clinical Ethics Consultation (001)

Stephanie Kukora, MD, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI; Brittany K. Batell, University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, MI; Katie L. Watson, JD, Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine, Chicago, IL

Healthcare ethics consultants should be competent in active listening, expressing empathy and support, clarifying the ethical dimensions of the situation, and eliciting and accurately representing values and priorities. However, little guidance for practicing these skills is available, and though simulated patient scenarios may help, gaps remain. Medical improvisation—with a focus on listening, cultivating and expressing empathy, speaking clearly, and identifying and managing status differences—can help close the gaps. Participants will engage in a training technique that isolates the components of successful medical communication and provides exercises that build one “communication muscle” at a time. “Being funny” is not a prerequisite for medical improv, and no acting experience is required.

8 am–Noon

Healing the Healers: Mindfulness for Healthcare Professionals (002)

Charity Scott, JD MS, Georgia State University, Atlanta, GA

Healthcare professionals suffer from stress, burnout, anxiety, and depression at alarmingly high rates. These conditions can have adverse consequences for both professionals and their patients, including occupational dissatisfaction, high workplace turnover, interpersonal conflict, and medical errors, which in turn can result in additional psychological, emotional, and financial stress. Focusing on wellness for healthcare professionals, this program introduces mindfulness, its many benefits, and the science that supports it. Mindfulness aids the ability to recover mentally and physically from stressors and challenges; it enhances cognitive reframing and promotes resilience; and it fosters competencies such as increased focus and memory, critical thinking skills, and ethical decision making. Participants will be guided in brief meditation practices that can be incorporated into their lives.

8 am–Noon

Expanding Educational Scholarship in Ethics, Humanities, and the Arts: A How-To Guide for the Future (003)

Claire D. Clark, PhD MPH, University of Kentucky, Lexington, KY; Marin Gillis, PhD LPh, Florida International University, Miami, FL; Amy DeBaets, PhD, Oakland University William Beaumont School of Medicine, Rochester, MI

Over the last 50 years, bioethicists and medical humanists have convinced educators that their field has a place in undergraduate and graduate medical education but have been less successful in making the case that teaching these courses requires specialized training, demonstrating how our instructional materials align with educational theory, and publishing evidence-based research in medical education journals. Participants will bring with them an educational project at any phase of development. After hearing a brief overview of conducting educational research, participants will rotate to tables on these topics: generating a research question, choosing research methods, getting funding, establishing collaborations, and finding a publication outlet. Participants should leave with an actionable plan for advancing a project that promotes a scholarly approach to bioethics, humanities, and arts education in medicine.

8 am–Noon

Advanced Facilitation Skills for Clinical Ethics Consultation (004)

Autumn Fiester, PhD, University of Pennsylvania Center for Bioethics, Philadelphia, PA; Edward J. Bergman, JD, University of Pennsylvania Center for Bioethics, Philadelphia, PA

This hands-on workshop will cover skills for effectively conducting complex, multiparty, and emotionally charged meetings with a diverse set of stakeholders. Careful attention will be paid to avoiding values imposition in consultations. Through presentations, question-and-response activities, and simulated role plays, we will teach the process of diagnostic listening; effective analysis and mirroring of individual concerns, values, and perspectives; and techniques for amplifying silent or weaker voices. After an introduction to advanced facilitation strategies, small groups will participate in simulated role-plays and debriefings to practice facilitation techniques in a variety of clinical ethics contexts. The session will close with a review of the techniques learned and performed and a Q&A session.

The preconference sessions are extra-fee events. Please see box D on the registration form for information about fees.

WELCOME PLENARY SESSION

American Firearms and Mass Shootings: Mental Illness, Politics, and Policies

Jonathan Metzl, MD PhD, Vanderbilt University, Nashville, TN

Jonathan Metzl addresses four assumptions that frequently arise in the aftermath of mass-shootings in the United States:

(1) that mental illness causes gun violence, (2) that a psychiatric diagnosis can predict gun crime before it happens, (3) that shootings are the deranged acts of mentally ill loners, and (4) that gun control won't prevent another Newtown. Each of these statements is certainly true in particular instances. Yet notions of mental illness that emerge in relation to mass shootings frequently reflect larger cultural stereotypes and anxieties about matters such as race, social class, and politics. These issues become obscured when mass shootings come to stand in for all gun crime and when "mentally ill" ceases to be a medical designation and becomes a sign of violent threat.

6:15–7:45 pm

OPENING RECEPTION WITH EXHIBITS

The opening reception provides a unique opportunity to network with other conference attendees and visit our exhibitors. Join us for light hors d'oeuvres and refreshments, catch up with your colleagues, network with publishers, and meet with representatives of the nation's most prestigious bioethics and humanities programs.

Friday, October 19

7:30–9 am

MEET-THE-PROFESSOR SESSION

The Meet-the-Professor session provides an opportunity for students and early-career scholars to share breakfast and conversation with distinguished faculty members. Seats are available to conference registrants on a first-come, first-served basis. Application forms will be available in July, and confirmations will be mailed in September. Watch the ASBH website or call 847.375.4745 for more information. Don't miss this chance to confer with a leader in the fields of bioethics and the medical humanities.

9:15–10:15 am

PLENARY SESSION

Learning from Frankenstein: The Artificial Body in the Popular Imagination

Despina Kakoudaki, PhD, American University, Washington, DC

Two hundred years after its first publication, Mary Shelley's Frankenstein, Or, The Modern Prometheus presents an interesting paradox: it is pervasive in its impact, while often remaining misread or even unread. The novel is now a seminal text, almost mythic in its cultural presence and dense relationships to literary, epistemological, scientific, and social contexts. And yet the book has also been reduced to a form of shorthand in popular culture, in which the very word Frankenstein, or its abbreviation into Franken-anything, may be deployed in complete ignorance of the actual text. This presentation returns to the novel, offering an overview of its main versions and tenets and focusing especially on its depiction of animation and deanimation, the processes of life and death that structure the book.

3:45–5:15 pm

ANNUAL MEMBERS' MEETING, AWARD PRESENTATIONS, AND PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

At the Annual Members' Meeting you'll have the opportunity to recognize and celebrate the 2018 ASBH award winners, learn about the state of the association and future plans for ASBH during the President's Address and Treasurer's Report, and recognize our incoming and outgoing board members. You won't want to miss this chance to learn about the influencers of our field and the impact that ASBH can have for our members and the bioethics and humanities professional communities.

5:30–6:30 pm

RECEPTION FOR NEW MEMBERS, FIRST-TIME ATTENDEES, AND STUDENTS

All new members, first-time attendees, and students will receive a ticket to this exclusive wine reception. Connect with ASBH board members and past presidents, while sampling wines offered by featured supporters.

Saturday, October 20

8–9 am (Exam Preparation sessions: various times)

HEC-C PROGRAM UPDATES AND EXAMINATION PREPARATION

The Health Care Ethics Consultation (HCEC) Certification

Commission chair and the ASBH president will provide an overview of the Healthcare Ethics Consultant-Certified (HEC-C) program, including the development of the program and plans for launching the first examination. Then in three sessions later in the day, members of the Clinical Ethics Consultation Affairs (CECA) Committee will provide exam preparation sessions using a review of the examination content outline, references, and practice test questions.

9:15–10:15 am

PLENARY SESSION

Using Health Humanities to Reanimate Medicine

David Sklar, MD, Arizona State University, Phoenix, AZ

At a time when technology offers exciting insights into human disease, health professionals are increasingly burned out and depressed, and patients are alienated and mistrustful of the healthcare system. Health humanities and particularly stories—both the stories of our patients and our own stories—can provide the antidote to this malaise. Sklar will describe the use of stories in his work as an editor of a journal attempting to influence health policy and education and as a physician and teacher with his patients and students. Stories provide a context and authenticity that can supplement data and science in helping us find solutions to difficult problems like medical error and health equity. He will share a recent story of his that explores a historical research ethics violation and explain why he chose to use the narrative form. Finally, he will offer suggestions of ways that the health humanities can help transform our health system by highlighting the social determinants of health and prevention of illness.

Sunday, October 21

Before you make your travel plans, you'll want to check the ASBH website for complete information about concurrent session speakers and abstracts. On Sunday morning, more than 100 workshops, panels, and papers are available to choose from. Before scheduling your departure, be sure to

- check out the ASBH Annual Conference Web page
- review all of the sessions offered
- select the presentations that will have the greatest relevance for you.

AFFINITY GROUP MEETINGS

Affinity group meetings provide opportunities for attendees to gather around common interests and disciplines. Many feature distinguished speakers and cutting-edge research.

Join ASBH and participate in this valuable networking throughout the year.

ABOUT THE ASBH ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Who Should Attend

The American Society of Bioethics and Humanities (ASBH) Annual Conference is designed for physicians, nurses, attorneys, historians, philosophers, professors of literature and the humanities, members of the clergy, social workers, and others engaged in endeavors related to clinical and academic bioethics and the health-related humanities.

Purpose

The ASBH Annual Conference is an arena for interdisciplinary exchange among professionals in the fields of bioethics and the medical humanities.

Objectives

After participating in this conference, attendees should be able to

- discuss emerging issues in bioethics and the medical humanities
- discuss and apply recent research findings related to bioethics and the medical humanities
- examine the future of bioethics and humanities and respond to changes on the horizon.

Accreditation Statement

This activity has been planned and implemented by Creighton University Health Sciences Continuing Education (HSCE) and the American Society for Bioethics and Humanities for the advancement of patient care. Creighton University HSCE is accredited by the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC), the Accreditation Council for Pharmacy Education (ACPE), and the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME) to provide continuing education for the healthcare team.

Disclosure Policy

It is the policy of Creighton University Health Sciences Continuing Education to ensure balance, independence, objectivity, and scientific rigor in all its educational activities. All faculty participating in this activity are expected to disclose to the audience any significant financial interest or other relationship they have with the manufacturer(s) of any commercial product(s) discussed in an educational presentation.

Continuing Education Credit

The total credits available for this conference are 27.5, as follows:

Preconference (extra-fee) sessions	Thursday afternoon sessions	Friday sessions	Saturday sessions	Sunday sessions
3.5	4.0	7.0	9.5	3.5

Physicians

Creighton University Health Sciences Continuing Education designates this live activity for a maximum of 27.5 AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)[™]. Physicians should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

The American Academy of Physician Assistants (AAPA) accepts AMA PRA Category 1 Credit(s)[™] from organizations accredited by the Accreditation Council for Continuing Medical Education (ACCME).

Nurses

Creighton University Health Sciences Continuing Education designates this activity for 27.5 contact hours for nurses. Nurses should claim only the credit commensurate with the extent of their participation in the activity.

Nurses Licensed in Iowa and California

This activity was planned and developed in accordance with the continuing education standards of the American Nurses Credentialing Center (ANCC). The Iowa Board of Nursing and the California Board of Nursing will honor ANCC continuing education for face-to-face programs held outside Iowa and California.

Social Workers

Approval of this activity by the National Association of Social Workers is pending.

Other Attendees

Other professionals who participate in this educational activity may submit their Statements of Attendance with their specific claim for continuing education units (CEUs) to their appropriate accrediting organizations or state boards for consideration of credit. Those participants are responsible for determining whether this activity meets the requirements for acceptable CEUs.
