Award Nomination Form

Nominations for the following awards are due by Sunday, July 7, 2024. Nominations must include the nominee’s name and current professional affiliation, as well as the reasons for making the nomination. The awards will be presented at the ASBH 26th Annual Conference in September.

The ASBH Lifetime Achievement Award is the Society’s highest honor. It recognizes a distinguished individual for excellence in bioethics and/or the health humanities. It is given in recognition of longstanding achievement in bioethics and/or the health humanities. Criteria for selection include but are not limited to influential scholarship; research, artistic, or literary works; significant scholarly, institutional, or organizational efforts that have enhanced the ethics of clinical practice; and/or meaningful contributions to undergraduate, graduate, professional, or public education in bioethics and/or the health humanities. The awardee is expected to make a 10-15 minute presentation at the ASBH Annual Conference. Nominees need not be a member of the Society.

The ASBH Distinguished Service Award may be given to a current and longstanding member of ASBH who has demonstrated exemplary leadership in advancing the goals of the Society. In making this award, the committee will consider such contributions to ASBH as consistent volunteer activity; extraordinary service on the board of directors, committee, or task force; advancement of a significant publication or program or other creative work; mentorship of other leaders; or other service that had a lasting impact.

The ASBH Cornerstone Award is the Society’s highest honor given to an institution. “Institution” is defined broadly and may include entities such as a program, center, journal or other publication, task force, blog, listserv, forum, long-running conference or course, or a single event or meeting that have made significant, wide-reaching contributions with lasting impact on the fields of bioethics and/or the health humanities. The Cornerstone Award recognizes outstanding, enduring contribution(s) by an institution that has deeply enriched and/or helped shape the direction of the fields of bioethics and/or the health humanities. Criteria for selection include but are not limited to influential and significant contributions to scholarship; efforts or work that have greatly enhanced or furthered the fields of bioethics and/or the health humanities; significant service to the public; and/or national or international appreciation and recognition. Self-nominations will be considered and should include supporting documentation such as letters of support, awards, or other recognition of the institution’s contributions from external sources.
